

Hey Mister Marshall: The Story of the St. Mary Rebels

The St. Mary Rebels were led by a core group of players who were all talented athletes and dedicated teammates.

- Cinda Proctor: Proctor was the Rebels' star player. She was a 6'2" center who was known for her rebounding, shot-blocking, and scoring ability. Proctor went on to play college basketball at the University of Tennessee, where she was a two-time All-American.
- Marsha Sharp: Sharp was the Rebels' point guard. She was a quick and agile player who was able to create scoring opportunities for her teammates. Sharp went on to play college basketball at West Virginia University, where she was a two-time All-American.
- Linda Burdette: Burdette was the Rebels' shooting guard. She was a deadly outside shooter who was able to score from anywhere on the court. Burdette went on to play college basketball at Marshall University, where she was a two-time All-American.
- Wanda Shiflett: Shiflett was the Rebels' power forward. She was a strong and physical player who was able to score in the paint and rebound the basketball. Shiflett went on to play college basketball at West Virginia University, where she was a two-time All-American.
- Susan Pruett: Pruett was the Rebels' small forward. She was a versatile player who could score, rebound, and defend. Pruett went on to play college basketball at Marshall University, where she was a two-time All-American.

Bill Marshall was the head coach of the St. Mary Rebels. Marshall was a former college basketball player who had a passion for the game. He was a demanding coach, but he also cared deeply about his players. Marshall was able to get the most out of his players, and he led them to unprecedented success.

The St. Mary Rebels left a lasting legacy on the sport of basketball. They were one of the first teams to play a fast-paced, up-tempo game, and they helped to change the way the game was played. The Rebels also inspired a generation of young women to play basketball. They showed that women could be just as successful as men on the basketball court.
