

Presidential Decisions: The Maine, Lusitania, and Panay Incidents

By [Author's Name]

This book examines three pivotal incidents that led to the United States' entry into war in the 1890s, 1910s, and 1940s. Drawing on extensive research, the author provides a detailed account of the events leading up to each incident, the decisions made by the presidents at the time, and the consequences of those decisions.

The first incident, the sinking of the USS Maine in Havana harbor in 1898, led to the Spanish-American War. The second incident, the sinking of the RMS Lusitania in 1915, brought the United States closer to entering World War I. The third incident, the sinking of the USS Panay in 1937, helped to convince the United States to enter World War II.
