Ed Drury was a young Marine when he was deployed to Iraq in 2004. He was assigned to a unit that was responsible for clearing roadside bombs. It was a dangerous job, and Drury and his fellow Marines were constantly in danger of being killed or wounded.

On one fateful day, Drury's unit was ambushed by a group of insurgents. Drury was shot in the leg and was forced to watch as his fellow Marines were killed. He was eventually rescued by a group of Iraqi soldiers, but he was left with a shattered leg and a deep emotional scar.
