In a world often shrouded in darkness, it is easy to lose sight of the miracles that surround us. But as Patricia Harman reminds us in her book The Blue Heron and Thirty-Seven Other Miracles, miracles are all around us, waiting to be discovered.

Harman's book is a collection of inspiring stories of people who have experienced miracles in their lives. There is the story of a woman who was healed of cancer after being visited by a blue heron; the story of a man who was saved from a car accident by a stranger who appeared out of nowhere; and the story of a woman who found peace and healing after losing her husband.

These stories are not just about the miraculous events themselves, but about the transformative power of miracles. When we experience a miracle, it can change our lives in profound ways. It can give us hope, it can inspire us to believe in the impossible, and it can help us to see the world with new eyes.

Harman's book is not just a collection of stories, but a guidebook for how to open ourselves up to the possibility of miracles in our own lives. She offers practical advice on how to recognize miracles when they happen, how to cultivate a mindset that is open to miracles, and how to create a life that is filled with miracles.
