With meticulous research and poignant storytelling, "We Need To Do Better" exposes the deep-rooted systemic racism that continues to plague our society, unraveling its multifaceted manifestations across various spheres of life, from education and housing to healthcare and the criminal justice system.

Unveiling the Intersectional Nature of Oppression

The book masterfully highlights the intersectionality of oppression, emphasizing that racism is deeply intertwined with other forms of discrimination, such as sexism, xenophobia, and homophobia. It challenges us to recognize the unique experiences and challenges faced by marginalized groups and the need for a comprehensive approach to social justice.

A Journey of Personal Transformation

Beyond its compelling analysis, "We Need To Do Better" also serves as a powerful catalyst for personal transformation. The author shares their own journey of unlearning and relearning, encouraging readers to confront their biases and engage in meaningful allyship with marginalized communities.

Empowering Activists and Allies

The book offers practical strategies and tools for activism, empowering readers to become agents of change. It encourages collective action, fostering a sense of solidarity and purpose among those seeking to dismantle systemic racism and create a more just and equitable society.

A Testament to Resilience and Hope

Despite its unflinching portrayal of the challenges we face, "We Need To Do Better" exudes an unwavering sense of resilience and hope. It celebrates the extraordinary efforts of activists, leaders, and everyday individuals who are working tirelessly to dismantle systemic racism and create a more just world.

"We Need To Do Better" is a tour de force, a must-read for anyone who is committed to social justice and racial equality. It is a call to action, a roadmap for change, and a testament to the indomitable spirit of those who dare to challenge the status quo and strive for a better, more equitable future.
